PREMIER LEAGUE | ENGLAND | MATCH 01

ARSENAL VS HULL CITY

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 15:00 | CET 16:00 | EST 10:00 | PST 07:00

Arsenal: 24 pts / 9 games | Hull: 11 pts / 9 games

Arsenal get the home lean after winning 1-0 at Liverpool. Their five league goals conceded support a controlled forecast, while Hull have drawn five of nine games and should not be treated as easy opposition. The hosts need patient circulation and clean recovery runs if Hull defend deep. The upset route is a long spell without an Arsenal breakthrough, followed by an away goal from a turnover or set piece. A narrow game remains possible even with a clear home selection.

NOTTINGHAM FOREST VS MANCHESTER CITY

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 17:30 | CET 18:30 | EST 12:30 | PST 09:30

Forest: 6 pts / 9 games | Man City: 21 pts / 9 games

City are the away selection, with their 20 league goals offering a stronger attacking baseline than Forest's six. However, defeats against Aston Villa and Brighton in the last two league rounds make this a recovery test. Forest can challenge the forecast by keeping the central areas crowded and making City finish difficult chances. The visitors need disciplined protection behind their attacks; an early Forest goal would change the rhythm and make a comfortable-looking table comparison much less useful.

PREMIER LEAGUE | ENGLAND | MATCH 03

CRYSTAL PALACE VS LIVERPOOL

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 14:00 | CET 15:00 | EST 09:00 | PST 06:00

Palace: 7 pts / 9 games | Liverpool: 15 pts / 9 games

Liverpool are the narrow away lean after a 1-0 home defeat to Arsenal. Palace have conceded 21 league goals, creating a route for the visitors to build repeated pressure. Liverpool still need to convert territorial control into genuine chances rather than assume the opponent's defensive record settles the match. Palace can reverse the call through a compact start and direct attacks into the space behind the visitors. Recheck the final lineups after the midweek programme before increasing conviction.

SUNDERLAND VS CHELSEA

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 14:00 | CET 15:00 | EST 09:00 | PST 06:00

Sunderland: 5 pts / 9 games | Chelsea: 16 pts / 9 games

Chelsea get the away lean after beating Manchester United 2-0, while Sunderland lost 3-1 at Coventry. The visitors' 19 league goals support the scoring case, but their 15 conceded warn against assuming a clean sheet. Sunderland need to slow the game and make home pressure count before Chelsea establish a lead. A poor first pass after regaining possession would invite the away side back into attack. This forecast therefore favours Chelsea while leaving a credible route for the hosts to score.

PREMIER LEAGUE | ENGLAND | MATCH 05

MANCHESTER UNITED VS ASTON VILLA

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 16:30 | CET 17:30 | EST 11:30 | PST 08:30

Man United: 7 pts / 9 games | Aston Villa: 12 pts / 9 games

The draw is our starting point. United have one league win in nine, while Villa arrive from a 1-1 draw with Fulham after beating Manchester City. Villa's better points total deserves weight, but their negative goal difference stops this becoming a comfortable away call. United need better protection when attacks break down; Villa need enough composure to turn promising positions into shots. Home advantage and neither side's scoring record point towards a close contest with limited separation.

BORUSSIA DORTMUND VS SV ELVERSBERG

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 14:30 | CET 15:30 | EST 09:30 | PST 06:30

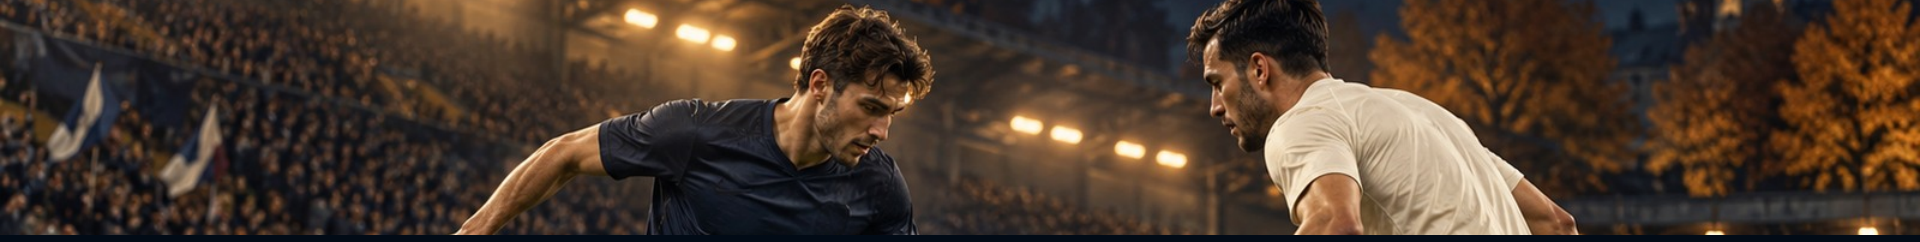

Dortmund: 18 pts / 8 games | Elversberg: 13 pts / 8 games

Dortmund are the home lean, with an unbeaten league start and only six goals conceded in eight matches. Elversberg have already earned 13 points, so the visitors deserve more respect than a routine mismatch label. Dortmund's practical route is to protect the middle of the pitch and build enough sustained pressure to create a second scoring chance after the first goal. Elversberg can overturn the call by keeping possession useful and exploiting any overcommitment. The home defense is the main reason for this selection.

BUNDESLIGA | GERMANY | MATCH 07

MAINZ 05 VS BAYERN MUNICH

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 14:30 | CET 15:30 | EST 09:30 | PST 06:30

Mainz: 10 pts / 8 games | Bayern: 18 pts / 8 games

Bayern get the away selection after scoring 27 league goals in eight games. Mainz have scored and conceded 17, suggesting enough attacking threat to punish a loose visiting performance. Bayern need to keep their rest defense organised while pursuing the scoring advantage; a territorial siege without protection would help the hosts. Mainz's route is an early goal and a contest broken into short, uncomfortable phases. Our projection gives the hosts a goal while favouring Bayern's larger overall scoring capacity.

RB LEIPZIG VS FC AUGSBURG

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 14:30 | CET 15:30 | EST 09:30 | PST 06:30

Leipzig: 15 pts / 8 games | Augsburg: 9 pts / 8 games

Leipzig are the home lean, but Augsburg's 18 league goals make a clean defensive afternoon an ambitious assumption. The hosts have scored 22 and need to turn that attacking output into a match they control, rather than an exchange of unprotected breaks. Augsburg can reverse the forecast if their first pass out of defense repeatedly beats Leipzig's pressure. The selection rests on a modest home advantage and stronger scoring baseline, with the projected margin less secure than the winner lean.

VFB STUTTGART VS WERDER BREMEN

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 17:30 | CET 18:30 | EST 12:30 | PST 09:30

Stuttgart: 9 pts / 8 games | Bremen: 15 pts / 8 games

Bremen get a narrow away lean from the stronger opening return: 15 points against Stuttgart's nine. Their 17 goals scored and 14 conceded still describe a side that must manage risk, not simply trade attacks on the road. Stuttgart's home route is to establish territory early and prevent Bremen from choosing the tempo. If the hosts force a succession of corners or second balls, the table gap could matter less. A close away win is the forecast, with low conviction in the exact order.

COLOGNE VS BAYER LEVERKUSEN

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 14:30 | CET 15:30 | EST 09:30 | PST 06:30

Cologne: 9 pts / 8 games | Leverkusen: 13 pts / 8 games

Leverkusen are a small away lean because their 18 league goals offer a clearer scoring route than Cologne's nine. The visitors have also conceded 16, so their attack cannot be treated as protection against a difficult derby. Cologne need to make their home pressure count and force Leverkusen to defend repeated deliveries into the box. If the visitors keep the ball moving without exposing their central defenders, the attacking difference can decide a narrow game. This is a vulnerable away selection.

LA LIGA | SPAIN | MATCH 11

OSASUNA VS ATHLETIC CLUB

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 17:30 | CET 18:30 | EST 12:30 | PST 09:30

Osasuna: 11 pts / 10 games, before Monday | Athletic: 15 pts / 10 games

Athletic's 2-1 derby win supports the away case, but Osasuna's home record makes the draw more attractive as an editorial forecast. The hosts have conceded only three goals in five home league games, despite a much weaker overall defensive total. Athletic need patient chance creation rather than assume their higher points return will transfer automatically to this ground. Osasuna still have Monday's game at Deportivo to play at the cutoff, so revisit the lean after that result and its availability news.

LA LIGA | SPAIN | MATCH 12

VALENCIA VS REAL MADRID

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 20:00 | CET 21:00 | EST 15:00 | PST 12:00

Valencia: 9 pts / 11 games | Real Madrid: 27 pts / 11 games

Real Madrid get the away lean after a 3-0 win at Racing. Valencia's 1-0 win at Elche offers a useful response, but their home return remains winless after six league matches. The hosts need to keep the opening phase competitive and avoid chasing the game too early. Madrid's route is patient pressure without giving away easy counters. A renewed Valencia performance can make this awkward, but the current scoring and points gaps favour the visitors.

LA LIGA | SPAIN | MATCH 13

ELCHE VS REAL BETIS

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 13:00 | CET 14:00 | EST 08:00 | PST 05:00

Elche: 10 pts / 11 games | Betis: 23 pts / 11 games

Betis are the narrow away lean. Elche have taken only one point from five home league games, while Betis sit on 23 points overall after beating Malaga 2-1. That supports an away selection without requiring a large score. Elche can challenge the call by protecting their box and making a low-event match last deep into the second half. Betis need disciplined patience and should avoid turning a controlled game into an end-to-end contest. One decisive chance may be enough.

LA LIGA | SPAIN | MATCH 14

VILLARREAL VS GETAFE

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 17:30 | CET 18:30 | EST 12:30 | PST 09:30

Both teams: 12 pts / 11 games | Getafe away: 0 pts / 5 games

Villarreal get a cautious home lean because Getafe's away results are substantially weaker than their home performances. The visitors have lost all five league away games without scoring, despite beating Sevilla 3-1 at home last time. Villarreal's own home return is only four points from five, preventing a stronger recommendation. Getafe can overturn the forecast by carrying their latest attacking confidence onto the road. The decisive question is which side can improve a weak venue-specific record first.

ATLETICO MADRID VS BARCELONA

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 20:00 | CET 21:00 | EST 15:00 | PST 12:00

Atletico: 28 pts / 11 games | Barcelona: 30 pts / 11 games

The draw reflects the collision between Barcelona's 46 league goals and Atletico's eight conceded. Barcelona arrive from a 6-1 win, Atletico from a 2-0 victory, and the two-point gap gives this meeting immediate significance at the top. The visitors need clean possession through the first pressure line; Atletico need their home attacks to create genuine chances without exposing recovery space. Either team has a clear winning route. Our 2-2 projection is a high-uncertainty scenario, not a claim that goals are guaranteed.

PARIS SAINT-GERMAIN VS TROYES

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 19:45 | CET 20:45 | EST 14:45 | PST 11:45

PSG: 20 pts / 9 games | Troyes: 8 pts / 9 games

PSG are the home selection, with 21 league goals against Troyes' seven and a twelve-point difference in the standings. The hosts need to make their early possession productive rather than accept a long sequence of harmless passes. Troyes can keep the match competitive through disciplined spacing, strong first contacts in the box and selective counters. A PSG goal would force the visitors to choose when to open up. The projected margin assumes the home side convert pressure efficiently; that remains an execution requirement.

RENNES VS LILLE

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 14:00 | CET 15:00 | EST 09:00 | PST 06:00

Rennes: 16 pts / 9 games | Lille: 18 pts / 9 games

The draw balances Rennes' home setting against Lille's stronger defensive baseline. Lille have conceded six league goals in nine games, while Rennes have scored 20 but conceded 19. The hosts need to create chances without allowing their attacking commitment to become an easy outlet for Lille. The visitors can win if their defensive structure survives the early pressure and their best chances are used well. A narrow away win is a credible alternative, with the small points gap supporting a cautious forecast.

BREST VS LYON

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 16:15 | CET 17:15 | EST 11:15 | PST 08:15

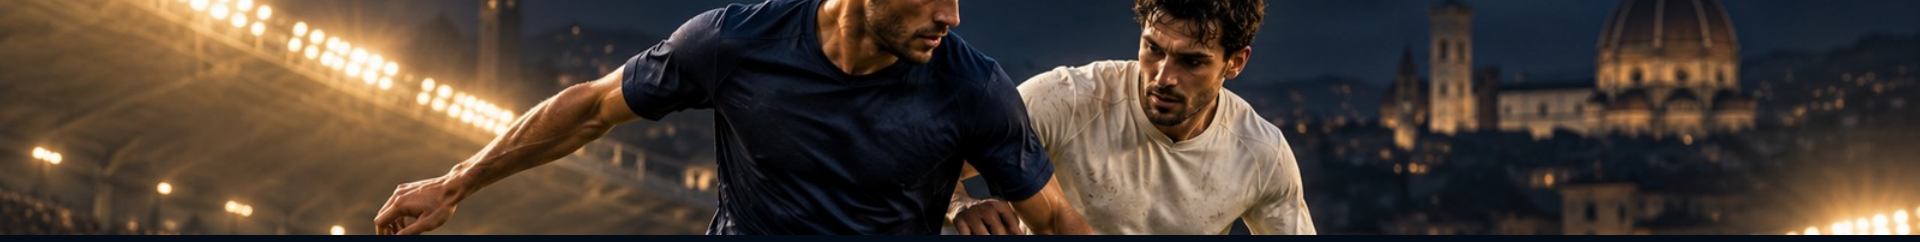

Brest: 9 pts / 8 games, before Monday | Lyon: 17 pts / 9 games

Lyon get a provisional away lean from a defensive return of seven goals conceded in nine league games. Brest still have their rearranged Monday trip to Lorient pending, so their weekend condition cannot yet be assessed fully. Reports about Lyon's possible coaching change add another reason to keep conviction low. Brest can reverse the call if their home attacks are sustained and Lyon's organisation is disrupted. Recheck Monday's result and the confirmed coaching situation before relying on this forecast.

LE MANS VS MONACO

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 16:15 | CET 17:15 | EST 11:15 | PST 08:15

Le Mans: 7 pts / 9 games | Monaco: 15 pts / 9 games

Monaco are the away lean, with the stronger defensive return providing the main distinction. Le Mans have conceded 18 league goals in nine matches, compared with Monaco's ten. The visitors have scored only 12 themselves, so this is not a forecast built on an overwhelming attack. Le Mans can turn it around by keeping the opening phase quiet and forcing Monaco to create against an organised block. A narrow away win looks more defensible than assuming a procession of visiting goals.

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 19:45 | CET 20:45 | EST 14:45 | PST 11:45

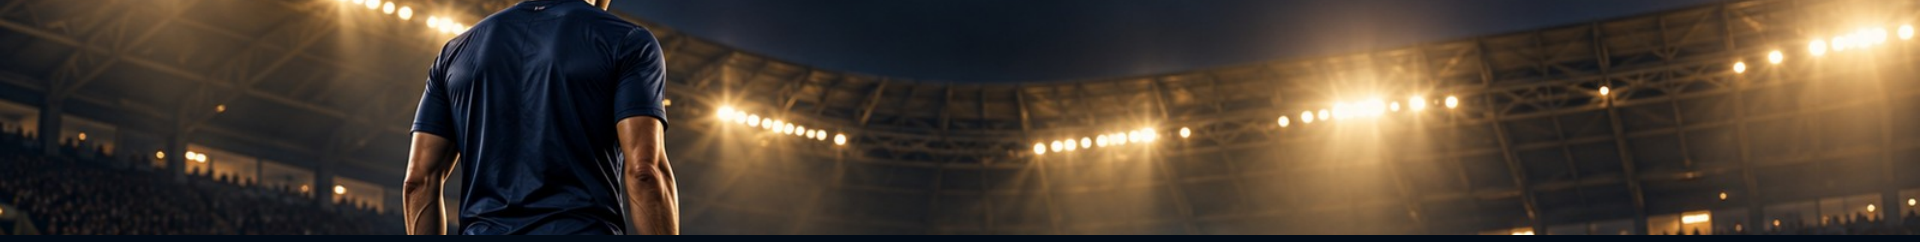

Lens: 13 pts / 9 games | Marseille: 15 pts / 9 games

The draw is a close call between Lens' home advantage and Marseille's greater league scoring output. Both have conceded 13 goals in nine games, leaving no clear defensive separator in the overall numbers. Marseille need their attacks to survive the home pressure without handing over cheap transitions; Lens need enough composure to use the opportunities their crowd helps generate. An early goal could produce a very different contest. At the starting point, neither side deserves a large advantage in the forecast.

SERIE A | ITALY | MATCH 21

Roma: 24 pts / 10 games | Sassuolo: 8 pts / 9 games, before Monday

Roma get the home lean after scoring 28 league goals in ten games. Sassuolo have conceded 22 in nine, but their Monday meeting with Fiorentina is still pending at this snapshot. The hosts need to keep pressure sustained while protecting the space behind the ball. Sassuolo can challenge the selection if Monday brings a useful response and they prevent Roma from taking an early lead. Our three-goal projection rests on the current attacking gap and should be revisited after the pending fixture.

NAPOLI VS LAZIO

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 11:30 | CET 12:30 | EST 06:30 | PST 03:30

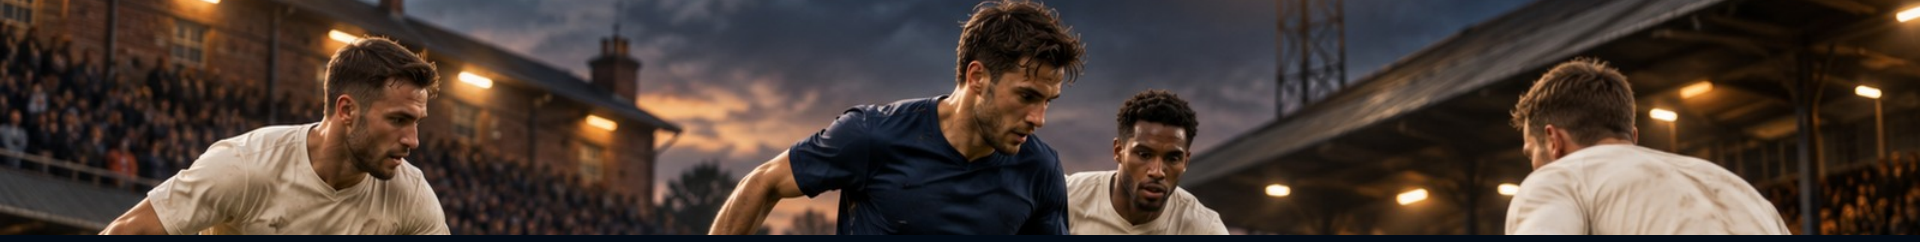

Napoli: 14 pts / 10 games | Lazio: 28 pts / 10 games

Lazio are the narrow away selection because their unbeaten ten-game league start carries more weight than the clubs' reputations. Napoli lost 2-0 at Juventus, while Lazio beat Cagliari 2-1 to reach 28 points. The hosts can overturn the call by making their early pressure count and keeping the midfield contest uncomfortable. Lazio need controlled possession and accurate first passes after regaining the ball. The points gap supports the visitors, but the away setting makes a close score more sensible than a wide margin.

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 14:00 | CET 15:00 | EST 09:00 | PST 06:00

Genoa: 13 pts / 10 games | Milan: 21 pts / 10 games

Milan get the away lean after a 2-1 derby victory over Inter. Genoa also arrive from a win, 2-1 at Lecce, so the hosts have a recent positive reference of their own. Milan's 21 league goals provide the stronger scoring baseline, while Genoa need the home setting to make the game more balanced. The visitors must avoid treating the derby response as a guarantee of another result. Genoa's route is sustained pressure on second balls and a match that stays level for long enough.

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 17:00 | CET 18:00 | EST 12:00 | PST 09:00

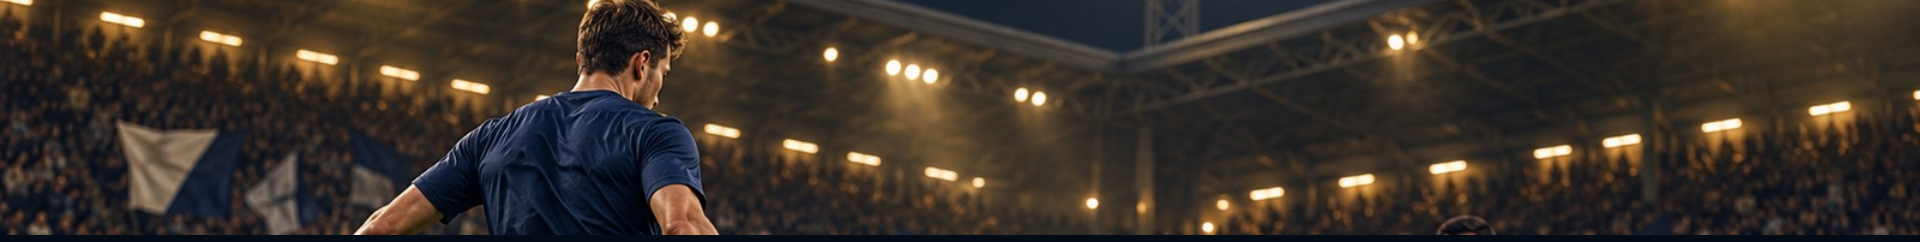

Inter: 25 pts / 10 games | Como: 23 pts / 10 games

Inter get a small home lean, with only two points separating the sides. Como's eight league goals conceded make them a serious test rather than an opponent to dismiss after Inter's derby loss. The hosts need enough passing patience to move that defensive shape before accelerating their attacks. Como can reverse the forecast by keeping their possession useful and making Inter defend more often than expected. A one-goal home win is the projection, with low conviction in such a close current comparison.

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 19:45 | CET 20:45 | EST 14:45 | PST 11:45

Fiorentina: 5 pts / 9 games, before Monday | Juventus: 17 pts / 10 games

Juventus are the provisional away lean after beating Napoli 2-0. Fiorentina still have Monday's trip to Sassuolo pending and have conceded 21 goals in their first nine league matches. The visitors need a controlled performance rather than assume the latest win removes their attacking limitations. Fiorentina can change the assessment with a useful Monday response and sustained home pressure here. A single Juventus goal is our narrow scenario; the pending result and final availability could materially alter the order.

WREXHAM VS WOLVERHAMPTON WANDERERS

Wrexham: 14 pts / 13 games | Wolves: 24 pts / 13 games

Wolves are the away lean after beating Cardiff 3-0, while Wrexham lost 1-0 at Sheffield United. The hosts' home results are more competitive than their overall points total, making an uncomplicated away win a poor assumption. Wolves need to keep the match structured and make their stronger scoring return count without offering easy counters. Wrexham can reverse the call by turning home pressure into an early lead. Both the assessment and team condition need another look after the midweek Championship round.

BLACKBURN ROVERS VS WEST HAM UNITED

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 15:00 | CET 16:00 | EST 10:00 | PST 07:00

Blackburn: 18 pts / 13 games | West Ham: 22 pts / 13 games

West Ham get a fragile away lean from their 33 league goals in thirteen games. Both defenses need a response: Blackburn lost 4-0 at Swansea and West Ham lost 3-1 to West Brom. The home side can overturn the forecast by protecting their box better and making Ewood Park a more controlled setting than the latest away trip. West Ham need attacking patience without repeating their defensive mistakes. The midweek round comes first, so this remains a low-conviction recovery-game forecast.

HERTHA BERLIN VS WOLFSBURG

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 19:30 | CET 20:30 | EST 14:30 | PST 11:30

Hertha: 28 pts / 10 games | Wolfsburg: 19 pts / 10 games

Hertha are the home lean after an unbeaten ten-game start with nine wins and one draw. Wolfsburg bring a genuine attacking test, having scored 25 league goals to Hertha's 23. The hosts' stronger defensive return is the main separator, but they must avoid gifting chances while trying to dominate the ball. Wolfsburg can reverse the selection by making their early possession productive and forcing Hertha to chase the match. A narrow home win respects the visitors' scoring capacity.

HEIDENHEIM VS HANNOVER 96

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 12:30 | CET 13:30 | EST 07:30 | PST 04:30

Heidenheim: 15 pts / 10 games | Hannover: 11 pts / 10 games

Heidenheim get a small home lean, with 17 league goals against Hannover's ten. The hosts have conceded 18 themselves, making defensive control the weakest part of the selection. Hannover can overturn the forecast by keeping possession useful and testing that vulnerability before the home side establish a lead. Heidenheim need good protection around attacking turnovers and enough patience to create high-quality chances. The four-point gap supports a modest preference, with little reason to trust a comfortable margin.

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 15:15 | CET 16:15 | EST 10:15 | PST 07:15

Girona: 21 pts / 12 games | Almeria: 26 pts / 12 games

The draw balances Girona's home setting against Almeria's stronger points return. Their scoring totals are close, 22 for Girona and 23 for Almeria, while both have defended well enough to avoid an automatic high-scoring forecast. The visitors can win if their possession repeatedly creates good entries into the box. Girona need to use home pressure without allowing the away side easy exits. With five points between competitive teams, a level game is a credible starting scenario rather than a certainty.

SPORTING GIJON VS REAL VALLADOLID

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 17:30 | CET 18:30 | EST 12:30 | PST 09:30

Sporting: 22 pts / 12 games | Valladolid: 12 pts / 11 games, before Monday

Sporting get the home lean after winning four of their last five league games, including a 2-0 victory at Ceuta. Valladolid still have Monday's match against Leganes pending, so the points comparison will need updating. The hosts should seek a controlled start rather than allow their recent run to encourage loose attacking risks. Valladolid can reverse the call through disciplined defending and a useful response in the pending fixture. A narrow home win is the forecast, subject to that extra information.

MONTPELLIER VS METZ

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 13:00 | CET 14:00 | EST 08:00 | PST 05:00

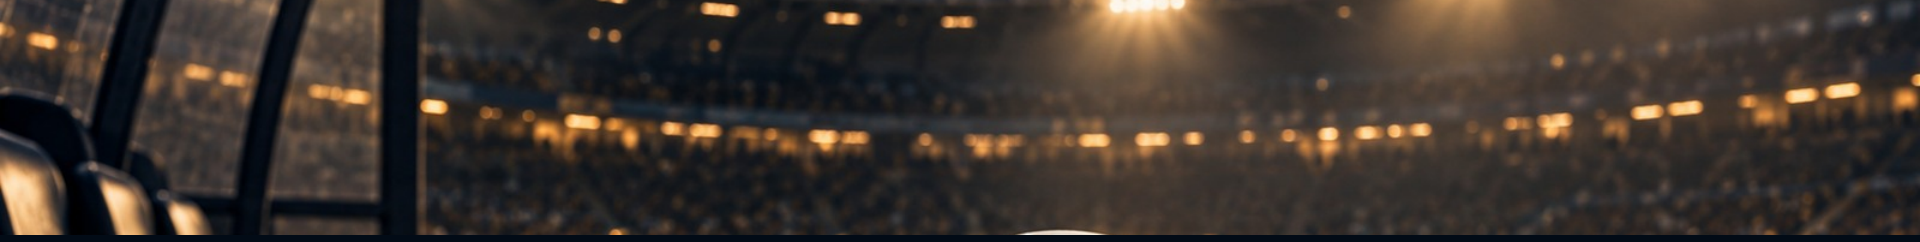

Montpellier: 24 pts / 11 games | Metz: 14 pts / 11 games

Montpellier are the home lean, with only six league goals conceded in eleven matches. That defensive baseline supports a controlled forecast more directly than it supports an extravagant winning margin. Metz have drawn five of eleven and can make this difficult if they keep their first passes accurate and prevent sustained pressure. The hosts need patience around the box and should avoid giving away a cheap set-piece route. A two-goal home win is the scenario, with the defensive execution still needing to hold.

LIGUE 2 | FRANCE | MATCH 33

SAINT-ETIENNE VS LAVAL

Sat, Nov 7 | GMT 19:00 | CET 20:00 | EST 14:00 | PST 11:00

Saint-Etienne: 25 pts / 11 games | Laval: 9 pts / 11 games

Saint-Etienne are the home selection, but their 3-0 defeat at Guingamp is an immediate reason to demand a response. Laval have conceded 21 league goals in eleven games, creating a path for the hosts to rebuild attacking pressure. The visitors can challenge the call by keeping the opening phase quiet and making the home crowd wait for a breakthrough. Saint-Etienne need enough composure to turn that pressure into chances without leaving recovery space. The points advantage supports the lean, not a guaranteed clean sheet.

SERIE B | ITALY | MATCH 34

CARRARESE VS SAMPDORIA

Sun, Nov 8 | GMT 16:15 | CET 17:15 | EST 11:15 | PST 08:15

Latest league games: Verona 3-0 Carrarese | Sampdoria 2-0 Entella

The draw reflects two different immediate tasks. Carrarese need a defensive response after losing 3-0 at Verona, while Sampdoria must show that their 2-0 home win over Entella can translate into useful away control. The visitors should avoid treating one positive result as proof that the next match will follow the same pattern. Carrarese can win by protecting the opening phase and making home attacks count. A low-margin contest is the most defensible scenario from the latest completed evidence.
